TRAVELING TOWARD PEACE

Frequently Asked Questions

Q What is the Traveling Toward Peace Program?

A Traveling Toward Peace is a religious education curriculum that combines classroom sessions (that use a multicultural approach to teach peacemaking) with an intergenerational peace play (that provides the context for practicing the skills and sharing the knowledge gained during the classroom sessions).

Q What is the plot of the Peace Play, “The Peace Adventure: A Play about a Peace Seeker’s Progress”?

A “The Peace Adventure” is the story of a Peace Seeker who learns lessons about making peace by traveling with friends to different cultures. The story explores concepts such as communication, cooperation and connection. Cultural sages met during the journey share their peace-related wisdom, and the Peace Seeker returns to the conflict situation that inspired the journey, and with new knowledge and skills, changes the outcome. The play ends with the Peace Seeker ready to embark on another journey toward peace.

Q What ages does the Traveling Toward Peace Program serve?

A The basic classroom sessions (which are based on the Culture Camp Summer Sundays RE Curriculum) are most suitable for children ages 5 through 12, though younger and older children have enjoyed the program. “The Peace Adventure” play is designed to be an intergenerational project, with adults and children working together to produce and perform the play.

Q How flexible is the Traveling Toward Peace Program?

A The Traveling Toward Peace program can be used in many ways and over many different time frames: one semester of RE; an entire church year (alternating classroom sessions with related theme Children’s Chapels or social action projects); a summer project; or a performance of the play as part of a congregation-wide social action project focused on peace.

Q What makes the Traveling Toward Peace Program fun and easy to implement?

A Both kids and adults love to play “make believe”. The loosely structured script provides plenty of opportunities to ad lib and customize the lines given in the script. Each congregation can add its own discussion sessions, book groups, or Sunday services. The curriculum is self-contained, and comes with checklists and timelines and suggestions for props and costumes for the peace play.
